

Spring 2021: Career Readiness Workshops

Career Readiness Programming are an essential component of the semester experience. These sessions allow students to enhance or refine their professional development skills, explore various careers and industries, and expand their social capital by networking with professionals working in their career of choice. Our Career Readiness Programs have been carefully designed to engage students in a virtual environment while affording them ample opportunities to reflect on their experiences, interact with their peers, and gain insight about their future goals.

Moreover, we have become increasingly aware of the many conflicting priorities facing students these days, whether they are taking care of a loved one at home or committed to a part-time job. Consequently, we've launched asynchronous learning opportunities this semesters that students can complete at their own pace to satisfy a portion of their attendance requirements. We hope to increase the number of asynchronous learning sessions in the near future.
